
A Typical Delaware River Sojourn Day

Meet your canoeing companions at the appointed rendezvous.

Check in for a welcoming address and the mandatory safety briefing. Follow river guides and enjoy the companionship of fellow sojourners.

Float along with naturalists, historians, and rangers.

Paddle a few riffles, Class I rapids, and occasional Class II rapids.

Enjoy the lunch provided.

Paddle 10 to 15 miles (about five hours) at a moderate touring pace.

Learn about nature, recreational opportunities, history, and conservation on short "river stops."

Gather for an evening program on nature, culture, history, or river issues.

Enjoy campfire camaraderie or evening entertainment.

Pitch a tent and sleep to the sounds of the river.

Sojourn Steering Committee Member
Sandra Schultz Relaxing on Day Four!